

An Ecological Snapshot of Racial Inequity: How We Got Here and Where We Need to Go TOGETHER" – Webinar

Our Presenter:

Albert Thompson

Albert Thompson is a war, conflict, and identity historian. Currently, he teaches United States history at Howard University and formerly taught for years at Northern Virginia Community College. Thompson holds a master's degree in Military History from Norwich University, where his research focused on the Troubles in Northern Ireland. He is currently completing his Ph.D. in United States History at Howard University, where he is writing his dissertation on the New Deal State, Race, and the development of postwar American identity. Since 2016

Thompson has led discussion and training on the history of race in the British Atlantic, American Christianity, and the link between this history and contemporary social and health morbidity. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts.